One airman from Davis-Monthan Air Force Base died and another was injured in a single vehicle rollover while traveling on Interstate 8 in Maricopa County, 69 miles northwest of D-M May 26.

Dead is Airman 1st Class Melesio Merino Garcia, 20, 612th Air Communications Squadron.

Injured is Senior Airman Ricardo Ortega, 612th ACOMS, who was the driver of the vehicle.

Garcia was declared dead at the scene when the medics arrived.

Ortega was transported to the Maricopa County Hospital and is in critical but stable condition.

The accident is under investigation.

"Twelfth Air Force is saddened by the loss of two superb airmen and the injury of Senior Airman Ortega, said Lt. Gen. William Hobbins, 12th Air Force commander. "Our thoughts and prayers are with their families and friends

MDG Silver Team paves road for more timely appointments

New EAS makes clinic scheduling easy

By Staff Sgt. Russell Wicke
355th Wing Public Affairs

The 355th Medical Group Silver Family Medicine Clinic began a trial period of the Enhanced Appointment System Monday that was designed to allow the possibilities of scheduling same-day appointments.

"After the new process is working smoothly, the Blue and Copper clinics will transition to the Enhanced Appointment system," said

Capt. Sarah Cuciti, 355th Medical Operations Squadron group practice manager. "This new method of appointment scheduling emphasizes 'Doing Today's Work Today.'"

"This concept has forced us to reconsider many aspects of clinic management that have traditionally been thought of as the correct way to do things," said Cuciti. But cooperation will still be needed from patients.

"In order for this to be a success, however, it will take an equally important change in the way you think about scheduling appointments."

Parking lot problems

Concern: People parallel park on the east side of the commissary. However, there are no markings for people to have any reference as to where they should be parking. Sometimes there is almost enough room for cars to park between each other and sometimes people park bumper to bumper. Can you get that marked off so there is some reference for people to park a little better?

Response: Thank you for your input. You made a significant discovery we overlooked. The reason this area is not marked with parking references is that it is a fire lane. As a result of your call, we are posting 'No Parking' signs in the area to assure our fire fighters have proper access to the facility. During our survey of the parking lot, we noted the remainder of the lot needed to be re-stripped. The re-stripping project was completed May 12. Way to police up the installation. Thanks for the eagle eye!

Where to get a new ID

Concern: I am retired Air Force. Recently while coming through the security checks at the gate, my wife was reminded that her ID card would soon expire. We went to the pass and ID section to get a new card. They were overcrowded but told us that instead of waiting we could use alternate sites at either the 162nd Air National Guard or the Navy Marine Corps Reserve office by the Wilmot Road Gate.

We went to the Navy and they told us they could not serve us right then because the window was down, or something of that sort. I called the next day. I mentioned I was Air Force and was told that they were not taking care of Air Force people. I told them there were signs directing us to the Navy and he reinforced that they did not do Air Force people. Evidently, the military places aren't getting along. I wonder if you could check into this. Thank you.

Response: I'm sorry for your recent experience. There are several issues that collided creating your experience. The overcrowding at our pass and ID office was due to the base-wide readiness exercise we were holding at the time. The Navy Marine Corps Office was experiencing problems with their computer system that day. However, the most troubling issue you raised was one of poor cooperation between the two offices.

Let me assure you that our policy is to never turn anyone away for ID card assistance, no matter what service they are from, unless there is an issue that we simply cannot rectify. Evidently, the Navy Marine Center people misunderstood what was happening when we had to refer several individuals to their office to resolve their needs. Since your call, the two offices have had good discussions about the issue, and cooperation in providing sister service customer service, to the best extent possible, has been restored.

Team D-M Mission Spotlight

The 755th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron provides warfighting commanders with combat ready EC-130H Compass Call aircraft to expeditiously execute information warfare operations. The 755th AMXS plans and executes all on-equipment maintenance actions for 14 EC-130H and one TC-130H aircraft, including launch, recovery, scheduled inspections, servicing and component replacement. They also conduct all maintenance training, aircrew debriefing and supply functions.

(Right) Members of the 755th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron perform maintenance checks on an EC-130H as they adjust cables on the empennage (more commonly know as the tail). The primary function of the cables is to jam enemy communications. Proper tension on the cables is important due to heat expansion of the aircraft. The tension is measured by using a spring scale and a tape measure.

M8, M9 chemical detection paper:

Because an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure

The use of M8 and M9 chemical detection paper helps an air base determine if there is a chemical hazard in the immediate area. The paper can be used passively by placing it on different strategic areas like vehicles, buildings or garments for chemical detection. It can also be used actively by dipping it in a suspected contaminated substance. Each are used in slightly different ways.

M9 paper: M9 paper is used for detecting (G) and (V) nerve chemical agents and (H) and (L) blister chemical agents. M9 paper will turn different colors if a liquid agent comes in contact with the paper. Color changes to M9 paper identify agent presence. However, it does not reveal the type of chemical agent present. Positive liquid agents show pink, red, red-brown and red-purple coloration. Blue, yellow, green, gray or black spots are not positive readings.

M9 paper comes in a roll 2.5 inches wide and 30 feet long. One side is coated with adhesive and covered with a protective paper strip. This is the paper that is usually applied to the chemical protective suit (see graphic). It is applied by peeling the paper strip from the tape and adhering to the desired object. The M9 paper is contained in a chemically treated cardboard dispenser with a cutting edge and comes with general instructions.

M8 paper: M8 paper is used for detecting liquid (G) and (V) nerve agents and liquid (H) blister agents. Unlike M9 paper, M8 paper will detect the type of chemical agent in the area by color-coding. It is not self-adhesive.

◆ A pink or red color reveals a blister (H) agent.

◆ A red-brown color is an indication that a certain nerve (G) agent is present.

M8 paper comes with 25 sheets of chemically treated tan colored paper bound into a cardboard cover to form a booklet. Each page has perforations down the middle to provide a total of 50 sheets. The front cover contains a color comparison chart used to confirm which agent(s) were used. General instructions for use are on the back cover.

Courtesy illustration

The detector paper dye in the M8 and M9 paper may cause cancer. However, since very little is used, the risk is small especially when common sense precautions are observed.

Avoid direct contact with the dye and always wear gloves when handling M8 and M9 paper. Never allow the paper to contact the mouth. If the paper touches bare skin, wash the affected area with soap and water to prevent the possibility of absorbing the dye.

M8 and M9 paper are subject to false positive indications caused by many substances. Use them to help confirm the presence of chemical agents, but never use the test results as the sole indicator that liquid chemical agents are or are not present. (Information from this article comes from Air Force Handbook 32-4014 Volume 3. For more detailed information on M8 and M9 paper, refer to this reference.)

Hold that salute

Air Force Academy, ROTC cadets to spend summer time with D-M

By Army 2nd Lt. Sheila Matthes
302nd Mobile Public Affairs Detachment

Air Force Academy cadets and Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets will be visiting Davis-Monthan Air Force Base during each of the following two-week periods: Monday through June 20, June 30 through July 11 and July 21 through Aug. 1.

Eight of the cadets are rising juniors at the academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. in training to become Air Force officers when they graduate in the Spring of 2005. Two ROTC cadets are from Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles, Calif. and University of Miami, Fla.

"As seniors, cadets receive salutes only from underclass cadets to prepare them for returning salutes after they graduate," said Capt. Chrissy Cuttita, formerly an ROTC cadet at Rutgers University in N.J. Cadets are entitled to greetings, but no salutes yet.

As tradition has it, the first person to salute a newly commissioned officer is to be given a silver dollar by that officer. The symbolism of earning respect through caring for those you lead is signified by this tradition.

Air Force Professional Development Training is a three-week operation for all the cadets. Week one is spent in wing briefings going over how they "fit in" to the Air Force, with multiple inspections before they are given the green light to leave school and spend two weeks in the operational Air Force.

"The cadets are here to see what job opportunities are available, and to open the flow of information about day to day operations in their chosen career fields," said Capt. Mike Bachtell, 358th Fighter Squadron project officer.

Week two is an action-packed tour of the operational Air Force here at D-M. Cadets will first be oriented to the Air Force mission and then begin visiting field-training units to see operations and maintenance. Cadets will visit the 79th Rescue Squadron, 355th Medical Group, 355th Maintenance Group, 357th and 358th Fighter Squadrons.

"The cadets will ride in HC-130s, experience the A-10 simulator, observe A-10s and F-16s delivering on a range, and go on an [Aerospace Maintenance and Regeneration Center] tour," said Capt. Bruce Munger 355th Operations Group pilot. "They have a packed schedule and will not be participating in the operational readiness exercise while they are here." Munger said.

In week three the cadets will shadow officers who are currently working in individually chosen career fields. "The best thing D-M personnel can do to assist the cadets in their mission here is to talk with them about real operational Air Force life and be the best examples of the level of professionalism the Air Force produces," Munger said.

When the cadets return from their exposure to the operational Air Force, they will have to submit reports on the training they received while they were here. This not only ensures cadets gained valuable knowledge and experience, but serves to help determine where improvements can be made in training. "There will be after action reports here as well," said Bachtell. The whole program is designed to facilitate the best possible fit for the Air Force and its future officers.

"The cadets are here to see what job opportunities are available, and to open the flow of information about day-to-day operations in their chosen career fields."

during this difficult time." D-M's loss is widely recognized beyond the 12th Air force.

"The entire Desert Lightning community grieves with the families of Airman Garcia and Senior Airman Michael Cole, 25th Operational Weather Squadron, who also lost his life in a separate automobile accident that same weekend," said Col. Larry Stutzriem, 355th Wing commander. "We remember the superb example they set for us in their pursuit of education and greater opportunities. Our focus remains on the recovery of Airman Ortega during this difficult time."

Col. Wayne Scott, 612th ACOMS commander, and members of the 612th ACOMS also express their sorrow in the death of Merino.

"His death is not only a great loss for our squadron, but a great loss for the United States Air Force. His dedication, loyalty, and desire to do his best made an immense impact in the short time he was with us. We all feel a great personal loss in his untimely death." Not only is this accident a tragedy, it serves as a wake-up call to the rest of the base.

"These recent mishaps bring light to how dangerous this time of year is for our personnel," said Michael Barnes, 355th Wing Ground Safety Office manager. "The 101 Critical Days of Summer Campaign message is to get everyone through this time of year safely."

Focusing on that message along with a safety mindset is advised from the top.

"The 101 Critical Days of Summer did not start well," said Stutzriem. "We need to reverse this trend. Take our 'Gimme five' campaign to heart. Take five to think about what could go wrong with any planned activity. The question is: Are we ready to avoid the pitfalls?"

ments," she added. "Gone are the days when you need to call two weeks in advance of when you think you might need an appointment. You will still need to plan ahead to some degree."

The medical group advises people to follow the below tips when scheduling appointments:

◆ But plan ahead enough to be freely available on that day, since you will not know which appointments are still available when you call.

No amount of open same-day appointments will make the clinic access better if appointments can't be accepted when they are offered. It will still be possible to get a future appointment if necessary, but it is important to come in on the day the appointment is made.

◆ Don't follow the crowd. The heaviest call volumes are Mondays and Fridays.

Chances of getting a choice of appointments will be greatly enhanced if a call is received Tuesday through Thursday instead of Monday or Friday.

◆ Avoid walking in to the clinic to be seen without calling for an appointment. Walk-in appointments place a strain on the schedule and decrease the clinic's ability to see those patients who did call for appointments, so plan ahead and make an appointment.

◆ Call as early as possible. The clinic receives a high call volume before 10 a.m. The earlier the call, the more likely a choice of appointments is available.

◆ Arrive early. It is advised to arrive no later than 20 minutes prior to the scheduled time. This point cannot be stressed enough.

◆ Use the Healthwise Handbook appropriately. This is very important because substantial portions of the clinic's appointments are used for problems that can usually be managed just as effectively at home (such as the common cold). These visits diminish the supply available for other problems. The Healthwise Handbook is an excellent resource for home diagnosis and treatment of such problems and is written in straightforward language. Helpful homecare information can be found on general symptoms and particular diseases alike, as well as specific criteria for when to call or be seen by a professional. Healthwise Handbooks are given out during Medical Right Start.

"Changing to the Enhanced Appointment System not only offers us a chance to manage the Silver Clinic in a more efficient manner, it also promises to increase your satisfaction level," said Cuciti.

"We are very excited and optimistic about the start of our transition to the Enhanced Appointment System to improve your access and satisfaction with your healthcare system," said Col. Carl Alley, 355th MDG commander.

"We hope that the EASE way of doing business will put you 'at ease.'"

SARS still claims victims, poses risk to military members

By Staff Sgt. Troy Hawkes
355th Wing Public Affairs

Severe acute respiratory syndrome continues to claim victims and put military members at risk of contraction.

April 4, President George Bush added SARS to the list of quarantinable communicable diseases. This quarantine authority would only be used if someone posed a threat to public health and refused to cooperate with a request.

Symptoms of SARS begin with a fever of 100.4 degrees Fahrenheit or greater. Headaches, chills, general feelings of discomfort and body aches follow. If symptoms continue after two to seven days, patients develop respiratory problems, including a dry cough. Patients may get to the point where not enough oxygen gets to the blood. In 10 to 20 percent of cases, patients require mechanical ventilation.

According to Capt. Oleg Voronin, 355th Aerospace Medicine Squadron public health officer, there are a few things military members can do to be more careful in regard to SARS.

◆ Visit the Public Health Office prior to any overseas travel (official or unofficial).

◆ Check the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Web site at <http://www.cdc.gov/ncidod/sars/travel.htm> for the country you plan to visit for a current travel alert or advisory. When the CDC issues a travel advisory, the risk for the traveler is considered to be much higher than for a simple travel alert notice and there is a recommendation against nonessential travel to the area.

◆ Travelers to SARS outbreak areas should monitor their health while there and for at least 10 days after departure.

According to the number of suspected cases in the U.S. chances of contracting the illness are low.

"The 363 SARS cases identified in the United States have been reported from 41 states and Puerto Rico," said Voronin. "Arizona has one suspected case reported."

SARS is spread by close person-to-person contact. Touching the skin of infected individuals, or contaminated objects, then touching eyes, nose or mouth are the major ways SARS is contracted.

"The chances of contracting SARS are extremely low. Most reported cases of SARS in the U.S. have been acquired during international travel to countries where SARS is believed to be transmitted in the community," said Voronin.

"In the U.S., casual contact with SARS patients has not resulted in documented SARS transmission. Most cases of SARS have involved people who cared for, or lived with, someone with SARS, or had direct contact with infectious material (for example, respiratory secretions) from a person who has SARS," he said.

SARS cases were reported in Asia, North America and Europe. As of April 13, about 190 cases were reported in the United States. As of May 8, 7,053 cases of SARS have been identified, 506 of which were fatal.

"Currently, the real risk of acquiring SARS is limited to those traveling to identified SARS outbreak areas; China, Hong Kong and Taiwan; or those who have close direct contact with an active SARS patient. In addition, Hanoi, Singapore and Toronto have a risk, but the risk is felt to be limited at this time," said Voronin.

There are prevention methods that can be employed to help avoid contracting SARS.

◆ The easiest and most effective preventive measure you can take is to frequently wash your hands.

◆ Cover your mouth when coughing and wash hands afterwards.

◆ Use a tissue when sneezing and wash your hands afterwards.

◆ As much as possible, avoid contact with large groups of people.

◆ Someone with a suspected SARS infection is requested to wear a surgical mask.

Leadership is more than a simple game

By Master Sgt. Marc Shaeffer
355th Component Maintenance Squadron

I want to design a new computer game. A small difference between the game I want to design and others already on the market is that you don't get to race fast cars through the center of town running people over, you don't get super-human characteristics that allow you to do super-human things and you don't get to club people to death or kill them with the other lethal weapons you're toting.

In fact, the goal of this game is to keep equipment from getting damaged and to keep your work mates from getting hurt or killed.

There will be eight levels to this game. As you finish each level of play, the game gets easier. Each level will challenge your character and at the same time test your ethical and moral behavior. After your character successfully completes all levels of play, it will be awarded a core value that reminds us what it takes to get the mission done. This value inspires us to do our very best at all times. It is part of the common bond among all players of the game, and it is part of the glue that unifies the current players and ties them to the great players of the past. This core value will be integrity.

The first level of play allows you to compete for Courage. Without winning this first level of play, or winning the remaining seven levels, work mates you are trying to save throughout this game will have a hard time

Final Answer — How are the training days helping D-M prepare for the operational readiness inspection?

Staff Sgt.
Cory Staudinger
355th Aircraft
Maintenance Squadron

"They are giving people time to sit down and discern problems and focus on fixing them. They also give us after action review time and bring everyone up to speed allowing time to train."

Staff Sgt.
Latoria Young
355th Logistics
Readiness Squadron

"By offering greater exposure to certain regulations, they help people learn about things that they don't see on a day-to-day basis and train on the items they aren't familiar with."

Master Sgt.
David Ritchey
355th Equipment
Maintenance Squadron

"They allow us to catch up on training so we can be available and ready for taskings."

Tech. Sgt.
Luther Prewitt
355th Maintenance
Operation Squadron

"The training days at D-M allow for the organization of unit preparedness for the operational readiness inspection. They also help identify areas that need work."

Staff Sgt.
Candice Sheppard
355th Medical Group

"They get everyone off shift and focused. They also make sure the whole wing is ready to go and fully prepared."

Master Sgt.
Rebecca Rogers
355th Maintenance
Operation Squadron

"The training days help units prioritize their training needs while helping the Wing Readiness Council Committee see the entire scope of Davis-Monthan training requirements."

trusting you and your respect level will be low. Winning courage will allow your character to do what is right, even if the personal cost is high. For instance, it will allow your character to speak up and correct a friend's dress and appearance knowing darn well they will think you are an ate-up maggot.

You will gain Honesty for winning the second level of play. Honesty is the hallmark of winning this game, because the work mates your character is trying to protect need to know your word is your bond. Your character shouldn't pencil-whip anything, shouldn't cover up technical data violations, shouldn't falsify documents, and your character shouldn't write misleading reports. The trick to winning this level is not to lie ... any deviation to this challenge and your character has to start the game over.

Accountability is the award for finishing level three. Once your character wins this level, it will not shift blame to the work mates it is trying to protect or take credit for the work of these same work mates. In this level, the character is challenged to collect all the letters to spell out, "the buck stops here."

Your character is playing for Responsibility in level four. To master this game, you cannot be irresponsible. You must know what duties are required to keep equipment from getting damaged and your work mates from getting hurt or killed. You must perform these duties accordingly.

Winning level five allows your character to practice Justice. If caught rewarding or punishing work mates unfairly, your character will start to lose energy points and respect.

Level six tests your Openness. Your character's organization will be tested to see if there is a free flow of information. They must be able to seek and accept feedback from all directions to ensure it is fulfilling key responsibilities. Your character can never be afraid to allow anyone, at any time, to examine how he or she does business.

Your character will find a "room of mirrors" in level seven. When level seven is conquered your character will prove it has Self-respect. Your character needs to be able to respect themselves as a professional and human being. Your character cannot behave in ways that would bring discredit upon them or the organization to which he belongs.

Winning the last level will earn your character Humility. Once your character wins humility, it will grasp and be sobered by the awesome fact it made it through all eight levels of play.

After winning all eight levels and collecting CHARJOSH, your character will be awarded integrity. With this trait, your character will be able to keep equipment from getting damaged and keep his work mates from getting hurt or killed. They will also start to earn respect and trust points.

Don't turn the power off without first saving your character. I am already planning two sequels to CHARJOSH and your character can be used throughout the trilogy. In fact, the more traits your character collects will allow him to keep equipment from getting damaged easier and keep work mates from getting hurt or killed with less effort. They will also earn more respect and will be trusted more.

The next sequel will be called RRDF (Rule following, Respect for others, Discipline and self-control and Faith in the system) and the award is 'service before self.' The final sequel will be called PP CRO (Product service excellence, Personal excellence, Community excellence, Resource excellence and Operations excellence) and the award is 'excellence in all we do.'

To find out about the different levels of play in the sequels, and to get some tips on how to beat them, read "The Little Blue Book," United States Air Force Core Values, or visit <http://www.usafa.af.mil/core-value/>. All the information for this article was taken from these sources.

Sonoran Spotlight

(Editor's note: Sonoran Spotlight is a weekly feature of the Desert Airman that profiles a member (officer, enlisted or civilian) of the Davis-Monthan Air Force Base. Members are nominated by their unit commander or first sergeant.)

Name: Master Sgt. Gregory Harrell

Organization: 355th Operations Support Squadron

Duty title: Air traffic control training chief

Hometown: Tucson, Ariz.

Years of service: More than 15

Reason for joining the Air Force:

The reason I joined the Air Force is because I come from a tradition of family members serving in the armed forces. In addition, I personally had, and continue to have, a strong desire to be part of protecting this great nation.

Main responsibilities: I am responsible for the design, development and implementation of training of all air traffic controllers.

Best aspects of job: After all these years, I still enjoy working the planes.

Goals: To make sure to pass all of my experience and knowledge to those who will continue to serve after I am gone. Then I will know I made a difference in this career field and left it in better shape than when I received it.

Favorite thing about D-M: I am lucky, Tucson, Ariz., just happens to be my home town.

Best assignment: So far D-M has been my best assignment because of the constant challenges and changes in air traffic control over the past five years.

It takes more than food to give a child self respect and hope. It takes the compassionate hands of love providing both food for the body and food for the inner spirit. For over 2 decades we have been committed to one mission ... feeding children with help and hope.

It's the kind of feeding we do best!

Last year we distributed more than 97 million pounds of food and other essential commodities. Supplemented 869,446 meals every day.

Thank you for being a friend of the children and Feed The Children. You're investing in the future of our society...our children.

Everyday conduct phrase scrambles to educate, entertain

In order to solve the phrase scrambles to the right, simply unscramble the tiles and place them in the empty boxes to form the complete message. The phrases were taken from the Air Force Pamphlet 36-2241 Volume 1, Section 8D, 8.18 and 8.19.1. While enjoying the challenge of the word scramble, let each message serve as a reminder that the importance of the Air Force's mission and inherent responsibility to the nation requires its members to adhere to higher standards than normally found in civilian life.

Answers will be printed in the June 13 edition of "The Lighter Side."

From ground up

Starting at scratch on Baghdad International Airport

Story and photos by 2nd Lt. Rebecca Garland
484th Air Expeditionary Wing Public Affairs

We built this city...

Stepping off a plane at the Baghdad International Airport, Iraq, members of the 355th Civil Engineer Squadron, currently deployed with the 447th Air Expeditionary Group, found themselves in the middle of a landscape of nothing, which to them was a giant playground.

"We were the first CE team on base into Baghdad with a few special operations guys that were securing the area. There was no one to greet us, no place to stay, no bathrooms, no food and limited water," said Master Sgt. Karl Deutsch, NCO in charge of the 355th CES team deployed.

The team arrived in Baghdad, Iraq, April 24, and since then have turned the airport into a livable area.

"Our initial focus was where to sleep, where to get food and water and where to use the bathroom," said Deutsch. "Within 12 hours of being on the ground, we found materials to put up tents and build our first bathrooms."

The team had to go around the base and find supplies that were mixed in the wreckage from the war to aid in the base buildup.

"We took everything we could find from lumber, piping, cables, chairs and toilets and used them to build what we needed here," said Deutsch.

In three days the team had 60 tents up, but that is not what they are most proud of.

"Tech Sgt. Richard Norman, 355th CES and Senior Airman Kevin Dougherty, 355th CES, took a pamphlet of expedient methods that they received during Silver Flag, (which included how to build basic things), borrowed a backhoe from the Army, dug a trench, and put a latrine right over it," said Deutsch.

In the beginning, the area where CE was supposed to build tents was covered with unidentified ordnance, anti-aircraft guns and bunkers, and at night they could see anti-aircraft artillery fire in the distance.

"It was amazing because it was the real deal," said Deutsch. "We had to carry our weapons and everything was a buddy system for safety. The EOD (explosive ordnance) team cleared 55 acres for us in three days so we could build tents and set up camp which was a huge help for us being that people were arriving daily and needed a place to sleep."

Because so many people were coming into the camp and there were only 23 Davis-Monthan members to build tents, CE adopted the motto of, 'If you're gonna live here, you're gonna help put one up.'

The team from D-M has put up more than 132 tents with the help of other CE teams that have arrived since late April, along with multiple shower and shave units.

"It was unbelievable how everyone pulled together," said Deutsch. "When we got here and saw the lack of living conditions, everyone did what was needed of them and more to get the job done."

The 447th AEG CE Squadron is putting the finishing touches on the build-up and the focus is transitioning to the sustainment phase, so they can work on enhancing the quality of life for people in Baghdad.

Aside from the build-up, CE is responsible for all the water, the sanitary conditions, the fire department and EOD, which at Baghdad International Airport is a job for a couple hundred, but is being done by half as many.

(Left) Staff Sgt. Stephen Chen, Tech. Sgt. Richard Norman and Master Sgt. Randall Adams, all from the 355th Civil Engineer Squadron deployed with the 447th Air Expeditionary Group in Baghdad, Iraq, work on maintaining pumps that control the water that runs to the Harvest Falcon shower tents. Members from the 355th CES were responsible for helping to build the desolate area around Baghdad International Airport, Iraq, into a liveable military base.
